I own most of Amanda Neel's coloring books and really appreciate her artistic ability. In her previous dog coloring book, "Lovely Dogs", she portrayed a realistic version of various dog breeds. In "Doodle Dogs", she takes a different approach by creating a realistic outline of the dog and then filling them with beautiful doodles. That allows me to go experiments with colors to create a dog of my own imagining. The designs are quite detailed and have intricate spots to color. Other than using an ultra-fine point marker, I didn't have to use anything special to color the designs. There are two types of designs in the book. One is a head portrait and the other is a full body portrait. The head portraits have elaborate doodle style frames around them. The full body designs have backgrounds included and a simple line frame around the outside of the design. There are a variety of breeds included but, unfortunately, no listing of which are in the book. This is what I found when I colored in this book and tested the paper with my various coloring medium: 30 Doodle Dog designs of various breeds. Designs are printed on one side of the page. Paper is typical of CreateSpace, thin, white, slightly rough and non-perforated. Glue Binding. Designs stop before the binding area with plenty of room to cut out pages if you choose to do so. Designs have frames or framing lines around the outer edges of the design. Book opens fairly flat for coloring. Alcohol and water-based markers bleed through the paper though water-based are mostly spotting. Gel pens and India ink pens leave colorful shadows. India ink can bleed through if you use multiple coats of medium. Colored pencils work well with the paper though hard leads leave dents at the back of the page. Oil and wax-based pencils can provide good color (especially with multiple layers.) I was able to blend and layer well with all types of pencils. I suggest using a blotter page under your working page to keep both dents and ink from marring the pages below.

I'd forgotten how much fun coloring can be! As an avid card maker, I have plenty of alcohol markers and they work well with the type and thickness of the pages. If you're going to use alcohol markers like Copic - what I use, make sure you place a piece of cardstock behind it or remove it from the book before coloring as the marker could bleed through from the back. After I completed my first, I wanted to do the same one over again using a different color scheme. So, now I just print a few copies and can color multiples of the same image. Your results may differ, depending on what type of paper or cardstock you use to copy. There are many different breeds and perfect poses.

I love adult coloring books, and if you like dogs, this one is very fun. Great artistry. The only reason I gave this 4 instead of 5 stars is that the designs get TOO detailed. There are so many little places to color, it's easy to run out of colors! I would often rather blend colors in an area that's just a little bit larger than fill in so many tiny little bits. But the artwork is great. Have fun with it!

4.5 stars This talented artist has provided grown-ups with 30 illustrations of dog breeds from itty bitsy lap dogs to dutiful guard dogs. There are long hair: shed everywhere. short hair: still shed. and my favorite: the no shed poodle. What's included: Eleven (11) head illustrations with flowers or abstract design borders to color with no background and nineteen (19) full body illustrations with color-in backgrounds and thin line borders. Both head and full body have oodles of tiny doodles to color. Illustrations include both standing and sitting canines. Most are front-facing; however, a few are side views. Some of the illustrations are vertical on the page but quite a few are horizontal. Breeds included: Cocker Spaniel, Doberman, Boxer, Beagle, Poodle, Chihuahua, Terriers, Dachshund, Schnauzer, German Shepherd, Greyhound, Great Dane and many more. All are recognizable dog breeds and are delightfully drawn. A few of the doodles are flyspeck in size and a sharp pointed coloring tool is essential. There are; however, areas where brush pens and large core colored pencils do have turn-around space.

Fun! KUDOS: 1. The illustrations are so much fun to color, but an impatient beginner might become frustrated because the designs are intricate. 2. One illustration per page on 8.5" x 11 inch white paper. 3. Glue Binding that is easy to flatten and stay put without having to constantly fight the pages to keep the book open. 4. Well-defined borders. No worries about leaving uneven strokes to give a confusing finale. 5. The doodle dogs are centered in the borders. All borders have at least 3/8 inches between border and spine, making it easy to remove the page without damaging the picture if one wishes to do so. 6. There is one blank page at the front of the book and two blank pages at back of book to use for doodling, note taking or whatever. 7. The cover picture is included. This is always a plus for me! 8. Address for download of printable PDF files is included at back of book.

DISLIKES: 1. Non-perforated pages. 2. Paper is thin and slightly grainy. Some colored lead leaves a porous look. Wet media leave bleed-through or shadows. Do not forget a blotter page! I used seven (7) brands of colored pencils – both hard core and soft core. I also played around with glitter gel pens, and I discovered while these pens look great in my coloring book, they do not photograph worth a flip!

Wonderful book. One sided art on a nice grade paper. Majority of the dog pattern are wonderfully complex with only a handful being a bit primary or cheesy. Overall, I'm very pleased with it. It is a nice, inexpensive addition to my color art book collection. Would purchase again.

Pictures are cute but paper quality not as good as other books I have (thin). Also, not perforated so hard to pull out. I ripped a picture trying. Ashamed to admit it's addicting. Two days, three hours each, and I am still not done.
