Surreal and sweet webcomic Breaking Cat News (Kate Fitzsimons, Publishers Weekly)

In addition to being a syndicated cartoonist, Georgia Dunn is also a children's and fantasy/sci-fi illustrator. She sells her watercolor and ink illustrations on Etsy, in brick and mortar shops, and to educational magazines and independent publications.

Miss Georgia is an extremely talented artist and writer. The drawings are painted exquisitely in water color and every time I go back to re-read a strip, I will always find some new and tiny detail I have missed. The cats are hilarious and heart warming, and they feel so life like. My family and I have become so invested in this strip and just adore all of the characters. Cat personalities are spot on for anyone who has ever been around cats for any length of time. These strips will make you laugh, cry, giggle, tear up, and outright guffaw. You won't be disappointed in this book. Edit: You can now find these guys daily in newspapers now! I have given this book as gifts to several family members and all have loved. I love how this comic is family friendly for ALL ages. You don't see that too often anymore. I really hope the publisher makes a second (and third and fourth, etc!) book of our favorite feline reporters! My cats give it 4 paws up each!

I've loved this comic strip from the first time I read it. The idea of cats as reporters is funny, & fits them, too. I love viewing the world from their point of view. I read the strip every day & can't wait until the next book!

Want to know what's going on in the world according to cats? Join our intrepid reporters Elvis, Lupin, and Puck as they research and comment on major feline concerns. How to prepare against the dreaded vacuum cleaner? Who is the annoying cat who is always in the back yard? Find out these and other facts with Breaking Cat News!

Georgia Dunn is a genius who seems intimately familiar with the inner lives of cats. I have fallen in love with Breaking Cat News and all the wonderful characters. I regularly laugh out loud while reading these comics and love revisiting old favorites on a bad day for an instant mood boost. I'm so excited for this book and hope to see many more to come!

Georgia Dunn's comic strip about cats (both her own, and neighbor kitties) reporting the daily events that happen around them as only on the spot crackerjack reporters can is warm and sweet. Whether noting the weather changes, the existence of neighbor cats, or simple events within the house, these cats are eager to let the world know about great things happening from their points of view. Cats Elvis, Puck, and Lupin are as excited about discovering hidden passages within the house as they are scared of the vacuum cleaner. A box full of packing peanuts tantalizes them almost as much their people choosing to sleep in on a Saturday morning annoys them. Sunbeams are as worthy of a report as their battles with their people to be up on the tables and counters. I discovered the strip last year, and have been entranced by the artwork and writing as much as the characters. Simple and sweet, these cats view the world from an angle I sometimes forget exists. My own feline family members would fit into this world quite easily, and it is a common event now for me to imagine any of our cats attempting to get the story of the day now as I go about my day. Based upon her own pets responding to the world around them, Georgia Dunn has spun a magical world where not only to the cats have mysterious access to cameras and microphones that no one else can see, but they are still open and innocent to the world around them. Elvis is the stubborn field reporter quick with an editorial commentary, Puck is the sensitive field investigator eager to explore, and Lupin is the desk anchor who can charm most anyone. The artwork is vivid, and you can watch the author's style progress from the earliest stories into the more relaxed and detail oriented visuals of later event coverages. As the stories tend to reflect things that happen within her family's lives, she brings an honesty and innocence to the page that any parent of pets can recognize within their own furry children. The cats respond to seemingly mundane moments with an energy and honesty that is both refreshing and sweet. While the cats may bicker within their social group, the family is always strong and loving, and the life moments seen with the wonder of a cat. If there is a down side to the book, it is that it is rather short, and some of the larger episodes are forced to break down into three pages within the book. But if the reader can fall into the rhythm of the story, it is well worth the effort to not expect a set up to punchline story within eight panels. No political commentaries or schticks to settle the reader into a pattern, the strip is equally likely to address the joys cats feel at the arrival of a pizza as the concerns of seemingly wild cats wandering into another cat's semi-established territory. If you are a pet owner, and constantly wonder what is going on in the minds of your pets, this is for you. If you recognize the same awe at watching birds and butterflies in your household, this is for you. If you have ever had a cat try to climb your leg as you make breakfast, this is for you.

There are not enough adjectives to express how spot on, timeless, and adorable this comic is. Brilliantly written, never failing to surprise story lines, and gorgeously rendered panels, Breaking Cat News is a new national treasure. Beyond the enchanting Cat News team antics, (which take place under the nose of the apparently oblivious Man and Woman) taking time to explore the details and Easter eggs she works into each episode is a joy in itself! As just about the nicest person on the planet, her sincere joy in bringing this strip to life shines through each episode. Georgia Dunn is a rocketing star in the funny pages. Buy the book now! You want to be along on this ride!

If you love cats, or comics, or both, you need this book. Georgia Dunn has created a wonderful world, inhabited by authentic cats and, incidentally, the kind people who serve them. Not only the cats, but all the details of the news program are pitch perfect and extremely funny. I will read this over and over until it falls apart.

This is more a work of art than a cartoon book although it's 'laugh out loud' on nearly every page. She is wonderfully imaginative and at the same time understands the minds of felines seemingly to perfection and when you combine these with her artistic talent, I feel like her own cats are a part of my family because they are so true to life. (Her characters are actually based on her own cats.) She captures the behaviors of my cats - past and present - to perfection and gives me far better insight into their strange minds than before I found her on the GoComics website. Painting in water colors, adding small but delectable 'easter eggs' which are a joy when discovered, she is, to me, the finest 'cartoonist'/cat psychologist ever. She added facial expressions to her cats soon after she began her work (cats have expression but their facial muscles are lacking in real life) and this serves to highlight their thoughts behind their behaviors. I am in awe.
