Award-winner poet/writer G.L. Morrison currently nests in the Pacific Northwest. Her work has migrated into dozens of anthologies including Best of Best Women's Erotica, Pillow Talk II, Mom: Candid Memoirs. Morrison entertains and educates, skewering pop culture in print and online magazines such as Bust, Bitch, Mother Jones, The Advocate, Saxis and Alternet.

Occasional flashes of sound and insightful advice are scattered randomly through a poorly organized, large-print POD volume running only 59 pages and containing a LOT of white space and not much punctuation. These facts alone are guaranteed to make any serious reader wonder whether the author is on the level or not. The text might work as part of a stand-up comic routine or even as a handbook for an amateur writers' workshop in which the participants are more interested in having a good time than learning to write, but not as a useful guide to writing. I wouldn't have felt ripped off if I hadn't spent $13.50 on this book of bittersweet nothings.
