Peggy Layton, a home economist, holds a bachelor's degree in home economics education from Brigham Young University, with a minor in food science and nutrition. Peggy and her husband, Scott, have seven children. With nine people to feed, Peggy writes about food storage and preparedness from a hands-on point of view. She writes and speaks frequently on bulk food preparation and emergency preparedness and has traveled extensively lecturing at preparedness expos throughout the United States. The author of a series of books on food storage and cooking, Peggy is also a food storage consultant and has helped many people put together food storage programs for their families. She is dedicated to bringing you accurate information as well as quality, tested recipes. Peggy and her family live in Manti, Utah, a rural town of 2,500 people, where they are prepared for any disaster--Peggy lives what she preaches!

I bought this small book originally for its hilarious name just to have in my kitchen. But I soon found numerous tasty recipes as well as useful tips for handling, storing, and preparing potatoes. You can teach an over-60 cook some new tricks. I learned soon after moving to Utah in the 70s that funeral potatoes are the perfect comfort food and available at nearly every funeral luncheon you attend. Yum!

Peggy Layton's books are always top notch. Information for city folk or farmers that cover topics of putting up foods and how to use storage foods (that's a big one for me). Canning foods I understand. But cooking powdered foods? Think about it. Some of us have been foresighted enough to stock up on powdered milk, powdered butter, molasses, eggs, etc. The immediate question then becomes, "How do we use the darn stuff?" That is where Peggy's expertise and easily comprehended writings come into play. If you've got the put-bys and want to know how to make something of them--get ahold of Peggy's books.

I think this is a fantastic book. Can't thank the author enough. If you like potatoes you will love this book.

I BOUGHT THIS BOOK AND 'COOKING WITH POTATOES' BY THE SAME AUTHOR. THEY ARE THE SAME BOOK. YOU ONLY NEED ONE.
