Customer Reviews

Let me be clear. I am a lover of plants and flowers, but a novice at the art of coaxing anything to grow out of the ground. I read SIMPLE GARDENING GUIDE (Autumn/Fall) by Maureen Larter under the misguided notion that I was a gifted gardener who had simply never gotten the proper instruction. The author did a masterful job of putting together detailed lists, including the when, the where, the fertilizers, and a mind-bending assortment of things I needed to turn a weedy backyard into a colorful paradise. After all her lists for the adult novice, it should have happened. It really should have. Unfortunately, I only succeeded in realizing that I have been deceiving myself all these years. I have no talent or inclination at all for this art. Even my house plants die. Yet my reading of this handy guide (it really is one!) inspires awe in me for people like Ms. Larter who can perform this wonder of nature art. More than ever, I am struck by the realization that gardening is a truly magnificent form of artistic expression, every bit as real as sculpting or oil painting or any form of the arts. And, yes, I am glad I read this book. I picked up an awful lot of information that only adds to my respect for the author and others like her. If anyone out there is looking for a compact guide for gardening, especially people who don't quite have their full credentials yet, this little book is a great way to get you going!
